PRICE FIVE CENTS

Dr. Cutler completes Forty Years as Principal of Mt. Hermon School

Following the annual custom, the Spade Oration was given by a member of the Senior class, Edward W. Thomas of Brockton, who passed on that symbol of labor to the Junior class, represented by its vice-president, Richard E. Howe of New Rochelle, N. Y., who made a brief response. The annual presentation of prizes, medals and scholarship awards followed.

President Speer then arose and said: "This is not only a Commencement but today means the completion of 40 years of service of the principal. I wish to extend publicly to Henry Franklin Cutler the good wishes of the Board of Alumni Counsellors in which the Board of Trustees concur, and to read to you the minute passed upon the records of these two boards last Friday night and Saturday morning:

"The Board of Alumni Counsellors extend to Dr. Cutler their hearty and sincere congratulations on his forty years of devoted and efficient service as principal of Mt. Hermon. We recognize that under his wise guidance the school has increased in numbers, has raised its standard of scholarship to a remarkably high degree, has provided better facilities for promoting the health of the students, and has steadfastly adhered to the fundamental purposes of the founder. We desire especially to assure him of the affection and respect of the alumni and to express its strong desire that continued health and vigor will permit his remaining for several years the efficient and beloved head of Mount Hermon."

As President Speer finished reading the above minute the audience rose to its feet and gave Dr. Cutler a great ovation.

The largest class in the history of Mount Hermon, with the exception of one, was graduated Monday forenoon at 10 o'clock, when 82 members of the senior class were presented their diplomas. Among the many prizes awarded was that received by E. Glen Albright of Souderton, Penn., who received the Cambridge prize, established by the students of Cambridge University, England, and awarded each year to a member of the graduating class.

Congressman Allen T. Treadway of Stockbridge was the principal speaker. Mr. Treadway was a classmate of Dr. H. F. Cutler, principal at Amherst. Mr. Treadway recalled with great interest his hearing D. L. Moody, the founder of the Northfield Schools, 50 years ago at Amherst. "This year," he went on, "we are celebrating the Tercentenary of the Settlement of Massachusetts. This particular section was the frontier of those early days. Literature abounds with anecdotes concerning those very days. Our forefathers wished for equal opportunities, based not on blood, but on merit and ability. This principle has been the foundation rock on which our democracy has been built."

"Now, what does all this mean to you, this history and progress of our country, when you have been active in education in the form of books? It is this: to show you how this preparation in school is necessary in order to fill the positions of responsibility later on. Increase of preparation means an increase of power and success. Mount Hermon offers you the chance to build for success in life. One of my friends in Congress, Hon. L. Q. Tillson of Connecticut, is a man of great influence, who has worked up from poverty to his present very eminent position of influence and honor. A member of three President's Cabinets, John J. Davis of Pennsylvania, son of a poor immigrant, is another man who has struggled and won in gaining positions of great trust and responsibility. We all know that our own president Hoover came up from the humble rural schoolhouse to his present highest position of highest eminence in the land. These are all representatives of self-made men. You have these opportunities. These places are offered not only to men but also to women. At Northfield Seminary, and girls are justly preparing themselves for these new positions which heretofore had been closed to them. In business and in politics high positions have already been assumed by women, so that it is only a question of time when women will be holding an equal number of seats in our legislatures to the men. The same will be true of business. In literature women have long held positions of the first rank. Many of you young folks may feel that the future is filled with opposition. These illustrations I have mentioned to stimulate you into feeling that you can win success."

"To help young men of limited means to get an education such as would have done me good when I was their age." This, written by D. L. Moody, was on the heading of the letter I received the other day from Dr. Cutler, your principal. What a heritage and what an opportunity is yours. Every step forward by preparation and application. The higher the goal of ambition, the greater the victory in attainment," were the closing words of Congressman Treadway.

The following are the members of the graduating class:

Class Day at Mt. Hermon

Class day activities filled a busy day of interesting events for the students at Mount Hermon School, and for the senior guests who were present for the celebration. Schell Castle, recently acquired by the Northfield hotel, was the mecca for the exercises of the seniors, which consisted in listening to the carefully prepared speeches of six of their classmates, chosen for the occasion. These honors were carried out by E. Glen Albright of Souderton, Pa. salutatorian; John H. Murray, Jr., of Elizabeth, N. J., president's address; Alfred H. Petschke of Providence, historian; A. Fay Smith of East Northfield, class prophecy; P. D. Fagan of Douglaston, N. Y., class will; Edward V. Naylor of Meriden, valedictorian.

Following the principal's reception at Ford Cottage at 7 p. m., the Joseph Allen Prize Declamation contest took place. During the year considerable competition had been present for places on this program. Finally, the following men won places: Judson B. Hall of Schenectady, who gave "The Yaugers"; Untermyer; George Milton of New York City gave "Spartacus"; by Kellogg; Charles W. Woods of Wilkinsburg gave "The Admiral's Ghost"; by Noyes; William A. Juvie of Philadelphia gave "The Shroud of Olaf Guldmar"; by Correll; Harold C. Kelshaw of W. Orange, N. J., gave "America and International Peace," by Roosevelt; and the last speaker was Andrew J. Yonkers of Whitesboro, New York, who gave "Reply to Hayne," by Webster. The judges had a difficult time deciding the winners. The judges were Harry Hayward of Philadelphia; Ernest S. Kavanagh of Boston and S. Douglas Malcolm of New York City.

The winners were Judson Allen, George Milton and Charles W. Woods.

The Northfield A. A.

The Northfield A. A. defeated Warwick at the Hotel grounds by the score of 9-4. The game was loosely played, but was quite interesting to watch. These two teams always provide a lot of fun at their games due to their friendliness, but there is always keen rivalry. Ascar Ahlson, the visitor's third baseman, provided the batting feature of the game with two singles and a triple in five trips to the plate. Columbus wielded the bat for Northfield with two walks, a single and a double in five trips to the plate.

When Indians Raided This Valley

Judge Francis Nims Thompson of Franklin County Probate court read an interesting paper on "Deerfield and the Indians" at the quarterly meeting of the Northfield Historical Society last week. The story of frequent Indian raids over half a century was woven into a chronological sequence that made one realize the constant danger under which lived the pioneers of this valley during that period. Ancestors of many of the older families in these parts appeared in the annals.

The society voted to erect a millstone monument to mark the site of the first gristmill in Northfield on Mill Brook, just west of the Trinitarian church. If the consent of the town and State highway authorities can be secured, the marker will be located by the side of the highway near the bridge.

The meeting was held in the Dickinson Library. About 30 members were present. A meeting of the directors is called for this evening at 7:30, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Colton.

Hon. Allen T. Treadway Speaker at Graduation Exercises of Mount Hermon and Seminary

Congressman Allen T. Treadway delivered the Commencement day address at Northfield Seminary Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the school graduated its largest class of 84 seniors. The exercises were held in the Auditorium. The final item on the Commencement program was preceded by the baccalaureate service when both schools, the Seminary and Mount Hermon school, both founded by Dr. L. Moody, gathered here to hear Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York, city editor of the Christian Herald, as the principal speaker.

After the organ prelude, and as the processional was played, the seniors from both schools, dressed in their caps and gowns, marched down the aisles and took seats reserved for them in front. The invocation was read by Rev. Francis W. Pattison, pastor of the Trinitarian Congregational church. Elliott Speer, president of the schools presided.

Dr. Poling took as his text the reply of a lawyer to Jesus: "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." "What did he mean?" Following Jesus means choice, the choice of a higher, a nobler life. To you who are graduating today this is the choice. The highest example of that nobler life was lived by Jesus and to find His spirit and follow it will lead to a thrilling life of adventure.

A young press reporter was sitting at a service conducted by D. L. Moody in England one time taking down his sermon. He was moved by the message, disappeared for some time, and then reappeared once more. Grenfell changed Labrador. To follow Jesus means to consider the individual, in order that through the spirit of that one person a change may take place which shall not only help that one soul in finding his true self, but shall also fit him for bringing His kingdom to the earth.

After the service a picnic lunch was served to the Hermonites near Palmer hall. At 2:30 p. m., the first and only joint rehearsal was held in the auditorium in preparation for the Sacred concert, which was given one hour later. The huge choir, seating 400, was completely filled and several hundred persons attended the concert.

Most of the program was taken up with hymns, but the remarkable feature about that was that these old songs were so well interpreted and also so very well sung that they seemed almost new. Surely they were refreshing. About ten of these well-known and enjoyable hymns, such as "Fairer Lord Jesus" and "Oh Love That Will Not Let Me Go," were sufficient reward for the trip. "The Holy Temple," by Gounod, was the most impressive number outside the hymns. The contrasts of soft tones and tremendous volume of sound were pleasingly evident.

Special numbers were given by Clyde Holbrook of Greenfield on the cello. The Northfield School Mixed quartet also contributed a special selection. The organ accompanists were Miss Marian Keller, Miss Mary L. Throop; the pianists were Miss Viva F. Richardson, Miss Helen E. Bush, Miss Grace Denmore and Leonard W. Ellinwood. "The Northfield Benediction" closed the concert.

Early in the evening the Seminary senior round top service, held on the knoll sacred to the memory of W. L. Moody, was conducted by Elliott Speer. At 7:30 the alumnae service, led by Miss Mary E. Silverthorne of Leominster, for 40 years a teacher at the Seminary, was held on the same place. Concluding the formal program of the day, there was a vespers service in Russell Sage chapel, which was addressed by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, the speaker of the morning.

Commencement program Opens

Saturday found the commencement at the Northfield Seminary and Mount Hermon schools in full swing. Every hour brought fond parents and expectant friends to the campuses, where the seniors were all ready to "show them the town." After the Step Singing at the Seminary, and after all the examinations had been taken and past in both schools, there knoll sacred to the memory of D. L. each school. The newest product, however, willingly gave way to the old feeling sufficiently rewarded in the knowledge that they were very soon to be the one and only class.

The regular June meeting of the board of trustees for The Northfield Schools took place in Kenarden hall at 9:30 in the morning. The officers of the board are Elliott Speer, president; Stephen Baker of New York city and John L. Grandin of Boston, vice presidents; Edwin M. Bulkeley of New York city, treasurer, and Ambert G. Moody of East Northfield, assistant treasurer and clerk.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the class of 1492 of the Seminary, made up of all those who attended but did not graduate from the Seminary, held their 15th reunion and supper at the Homestead. Mrs. Fred Holton is president of this famous organization. At the tea which took place earlier in the afternoon on the lawn near the Home Science hall, the Mount Hermon band furnished music. In the evening at 8:15, at the Auditorium, the Exley Chorus and the Mount Hermon Glee Club gave a concert. The Exley Chorus gave three numbers, some of which were of a semi-classical character. The Glee Club sang three numbers also, some of which were old folks songs. In addition, Miss Richardson played the Ballade from Chopin, and Mr. Fairfield played the Masurka by Hubay on the violin. In the numbers presented by the combined clubs, the voices blended most harmoniously as if trained as a unit.

Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability, and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing. Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance. Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

Sir Hubert Wilkins Discovers 540,000 Square Miles

(1) Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins. (2) Members of the second Wilkins aerial expedition to the Antarctic, left to right: Orval Porter, engineer; Al Cheesman and Parker Cramer, pilots, and Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins. (3) One of the airplanes in which Captain Wilkins flew more than 5,000 miles in the Antarctic. He was the first to fly in that region. (4) One of the striking air views of the Antarctic. Captain Wilkins has made a complete photographic record of his pioneering flights in the Far South.

"I'm not interested in doing what other people have done or going where others have gone. I want to do what others haven't done and go where no one else has gone before."

Here is the creed of the true explorer. The speaker is Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins—one who, from his record of achievement as a scientist and explorer, is especially qualified to speak for his clan.

Adventure and romance are not dead!

Captain Wilkins has lived up to the creed of the true explorer. In 17 years of exploration work in the Polar regions he has seen more land never before observed by human eyes than any other man. The figure is astounding—fully 540,000 square miles of land in the Arctic and Antarctic that he was the first to see. Much of this vast acreage he has recorded for posterity in maps and pictures.

Some of this territory he saw first on foot. Then, in more recent years he saw the same land—and a great deal more—from the air. In 1928, with the late Carl Ben Eielson as his pilot, he flew from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen. Fully 1,200 miles of the 2,300 miles covered on this trip comprised straight line flying over territory never before seen. In two aerial expeditions to the Antarctic his straight line flying over land not previously observed totaled 1,500 miles.

It is figured that in flying of this sort, the eyes can take in 100 miles on either side of the course, making 200 miles in all. Multiply 200 by 2,700, which is the total of his straight line flying over previously unobserved territory in both the Arctic and Antarctic, and we get the 540,000 figure.

Captain Wilkins has tramped on foot over a total of 5,000 miles of Arctic wastes. The total mileage of his flights in the Arctic is 15,000, 10 per cent of which was over territory never before seen. In the Antarctic Captain Wilkins has flown a total of 6,000 miles, 25 per cent of which was over previously unknown land.

"And," observed Captain Wilkins, "although I've been through my full share of difficulties, I've never had any occasion to ask for help."

First to Fly in Antarctic

Captain Wilkins has conducted two aerial exhibitions into the bleak Antarctic. On the first, late in 1928, he was the first to fly in the Antarctic and his main discovery was that Graham Land was a group of islands separated from the Antarctic Continent by an ice filled channel, as against the former theory that Graham Land was a continuous body of land and part of the Antarctic Continent.

The expedition's chief flight lasted 9 hours. About 1,200 miles of hitherto unknown land were covered on this flight alone. With Captain Wilkins on the expedition were the late Lieutenant Eielson, Joe Crosson, pilot, and Orval Porter, expert aviation mechanic.

In the fall of 1929 Captain Wilkins set out on his second Antarctic aerial expedition. His aides this time were Parker D. Cramer, pilot; Al Cheesman, pilot, and Porter. The expedition, in a few short months, pushed back the Antarctic Continent by about 8 degrees, discovered five new islands, charted about 1,200 miles of coastline, completed the location of 12 suitable points for meteorological stations, determined that Charcot Land is an island and not part of the mainland, as supposed, and obtained some valuable and new biological data on Antarctic life.

Great things are planned by scientists and explorers for the immediate years ahead. A vast concentration of scientific brain and man power is projected for 1932 when an extensive International Expedition will get under way. This project has the backing of great scientific organizations and societies and already many countries have signified their wish to be partners in the undertaking.

Captain Wilkins' immediate part in the International Expedition's work will be the carrying out in the summer of 1931 of his much discussed submarine trip across the North Pole, making his way underneath the ice. Plans for this trip in a submersible vessel are rapidly taking form.

"I'm firmly convinced this submersible vessel trip is the safest thing I've

Outstanding Features of Sir Hubert Wilkins' Career

He has seen for the first time more land than any other explorer.

He was first to fly in the Antarctic.

He has flown more than 15,000 miles in the Arctic.

He has flown more than 6,000 miles in the Antarctic.

He has added to the known world 540,000 square miles.

He has had many narrow escapes but has never had to ask for help.

He insists that his submarine trip to the North Pole is "the safest thing I have planned to do in 15 years."

planned to do in 15 years," said Captain Wilkins. "I actually believe it's safer than flying. Of course, there are doubters who scoff at the idea, but the ridicule of these people doesn't bother me. I'm used to that. Why, as few years ago as 1919 people everywhere said it was absolutely out of the question for an airplane to fly over the Pole."

"Just as people changed their minds about the airplane, so they are changing their minds about the submarine and the chances for using it in exploration work in the Arctic."

Every Safety Factor Planned

"Every feature of the proposed trip is being gone into. Every safety factor is being worked out. We are preparing for every possible emergency."

"From my Arctic and Antarctic experience I know you never find a piece of ice more than 20 miles across. Thus we would be able to come up within 10 miles if and when we go under such a large piece of ice. In other words we would be able to rise within 10 miles of any given spot in the Arctic Ocean."

"We will also have methods for cutting our way right up through an ice barrier, if necessary—a telescopic conning tower, drills, and other apparatus operated from the inside."

"Our maximum traveling speed will be 4 miles an hour under the ice. We will have a fuel range of 7,000 miles which will provide an ample margin of safety for our trip of about 2,200 miles. I know the North Pole is navigable. We will not go deeper than 300 feet."

"Our work will directly tie in with the proposed aims of the International Expedition. Scientists want me to proceed with this expedition to better determine what conditions man must contend with in the heart of the Arctic—to pave the way for the International Expedition so they will carry on with the right tools for effective work."

"It will be our aim to make a thorough study of the region so that we can inform the International Expedition of the difficulties to expect, the dangers to avoid, the equipment to carry and how to go."

"Another important objective will be to make a preliminary test of the possibility of developing trade routes across the Arctic with submersible vessels. If it is eventually found practical for commercial submersibles to make their way underneath the ice, trade in the Far North could be kept up for at least 10 months in the year instead of the mere four months, as at present."

It is in the science of meteorology that Captain Wilkins is particularly interested. He visions the time when the North and South Poles will be surrounded by meteorological observation stations which will cooperate with the stations in the more temperate zones in the study of atmospheric conditions with the idea of making long-range weather forecasts.

"It is known," Captain Wilkins said, "that there is a direct relationship between conditions in the Arctic and Antarctic and conditions in other parts of the world. But much work remains to be done to determine the full scope and strength of the influence the North and South Poles exert on the weather of other sections."

Captain Wilkins started his polar exploration work in 1913 when he joined the Canadian Arctic Expedition of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, another famous explorer. Stefansson's expedition was made up of a northern and southern group.

His Career With Stefansson

Captain Wilkins served with Stefansson for three years. Although he was born on the southern edge of the tropics in Australia, he showed himself well fitted for work in the North and became one of the most efficient men on the expedition.

Stefansson's aide and photographer then entered the World War. Joining the Australian forces, he went to the western front in France as a photographer. He was promoted to Captain, was placed in command of the Australian airplanes, was cited several times for bravery and at the end of the war was cited by the Commander-in-Chief of the Australian forces as the combination of the bravest and most useful man of that entire great army.

After the World War he began to plan his own Polar work in earnest. In 1919 he made his first trip to the Arctic as second in command of the British Imperial Antarctic Expedition. The expedition did its exploring by foot and by boat. It was beset by great hardships.

Knighted by King George

Captain Wilkins continued his polar work. It was his aim to fly across the Arctic. He encountered many difficulties in his efforts to accomplish this but he was finally successful in 1928 when he and Eielson made their memorable flight from Alaska to Spitzbergen. They were the first and are still the only men who have flown the entire way across the Polar Sea from the one continent to the other. He was knighted by the King of England for this achievement. It was in the same year that he started on his first aerial expedition into the Antarctic.

Because of the great public interest in the polar regions Captain Wilkins is often called on to speak over the radio on his experiences there, his latest radio talk being from New York on May 28 over WEAF and 29 associated NBC stations as the feature of the Mobil Oil Hour.

Captain Wilkins, who in 18 years has never lived for more than 6 weeks in any one house, now is in New York City laying plans for his submarine trip in the Arctic. He expects to board the Graf Zeppelin when she arrives in the United States early in June and make the return journey with her.

Lake Pleasant

The Temple tea room has been newly painted and had a new platform built in front.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton T. Gaskill, who the lessees of the Lake Pleasant hotel, are busy getting in readiness for the formal opening June 29.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Streeter have returned from Perry, N. Y., where they were called recently for the burial of Mrs. Streeter's mother, Mrs. Hawley.

Mr. and Mrs. J. William Feyl are located at the Oceola and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Snipes and Forest Newcomb are at the Snipes Nest on Massasoit street.

The Temple Tea Room opened last Saturday. Secretary Albert P. Blinn is receiving many calls for the 1930 camp meeting program, which has been issued in an attractive eight-page booklet.

Burton T. Gaskill is busy returning part of the Lake Pleasant hotel and painting the interior of the office and parlor. The hotel will be formally opened the last Sunday of June.

Recent reports from Mrs. Sara A. Kimball, who has been ill with pneumonia at the Osteopathic hospital in Brookline, are not favorable. Her advanced age, 87 years, is against her and she is gradually losing strength.

Mrs. Abel-Douglass has hired the Morse cottage on Montague street for the season. L. E. Henry and Miss Neas are located at the Harvey cottage. Mr. Henry was postmaster for many years but resigned last October and sold his store to K. J. Leon Roby.

Secretary Albert P. Blinn is receiving congratulations upon the attractive appearance of the camp meeting program issued this season. It contains the finest list of speakers and psychics that have been here for many years. Mr. Blinn will mail a copy to anyone on application.

It is reported that the 96-year-old Civil War Veteran, William Critchley, who appeared in the District Court last week charged with setting a fire May 4th without a permit and whose case was continued until Aug. 4, will have some of his people live with him and look after him while he is staying here, as he is too old to live alone.

The dance season will open the the Temple Saturday night with the popular Goodnow Singing Orchestra of Orange to furnish the music, as usual. This is the sixth season that this orchestra has been playing at the Lake and each season the increased attendance at the dances attests to its popularity.

Quite a number from here have attended the services during the past two Sunday mornings at the Unitarian Congregational church at Montague village, where Rev. Royal Griffith is preaching some splendid sermons. Mrs. Griffith is serving as organist and Mrs. Rose Manchester as soloist. Mrs. Manchester, who had been engaged as soloist for the annual Assembly of Spiritualists at Lily Dale, N. Y., for the month of July, has been obliged to cancel her contract on account of the ill health of her father, Rev. Mr. Dean.

The people are arriving much earlier than usual and many of the cottages which are usually closed until the latter part of June are now occupied. Among recent arrivals are Mrs. Annie M. Blockford and her daughter Mrs. Frances Blockford Allen; Mrs. Nellie Hueist and Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, Dr. Annie M. Fielding, Monroe S. Burt and family, Mrs. Mary E. Laurent and daughter; Dr. Harold Lamb and family, E. H. Perry and family, Mrs. Jennie Dodge, Mrs. Florence Knowles and "Gussie", Rev. L. C. Manchester and wife and Mr. Mrs. Leonard T. Purdy.

The Saturday night at the Temple the opening dance of the season brought an attendance that broke all records for so early in the season, over 150 couples being on the floor. The Goodnow Singing Orchestra of Orange, which has played here for the past six seasons, appeared in new uniforms and the music was excellent. Earl Gullford, the local officer in attendance at the assemblies, also appeared in new uniform and received many compliments upon his trig appearance. The State law requires that an officer be in attendance at all public dances and the Selectmen of Montague have passed an ordinance that the officers, while on duty, shall appear in full uniform, even though the officer serves without pay.

The Seven Millionth Car

The seven millionth car built by the Chevrolet Motor Company is on its way to its owner somewhere in America. The epochal car, which happened to be a coach, rolled off the assembly line Wednesday morning, May 28, in the company's huge plant at Flint, Mich. The car was the 1,846,936 six-cylinder car produced by Chevrolet since this model was brought out in January, 1929. Chevrolet's newest record maker arrived without benefit of ceremony except for the cheers of the workmen along the final assembly line, who halted work long enough to give it welcome and watch it being driven to the loading docks for shipment. Then work was resumed and not many seconds later car No. 7,000,001 went to join its historic companion.

Various dates in the life of the Chevrolet Motor Company on which the millionth car marks have been passed furnished a graphic picture of the rapid strides made by the company to its position of six-cylinder leadership in the industry. Nearly 12 years elapsed after the company's organization before the one millionth car rolled off the assembly line less than two years and five months later, on July 20, 1925. A year and six months later on Jan. 13, 1927, the three millionth car was produced. Thereafter less than a year was required to reach each of the succeeding million marks. The four millionth was produced on Jan. 11, 1928, in 365 days; the five millionth on Sept. 8, 1928, in eight months, three days; the sixth millionth, on June 25, 1929, in 9 months, 17 days. The seven millionth mark, just passed, was reached in 10 months, 25 days.

Commenting on the production of the seven millionth Chevrolet, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the company, declared that building a million six-cylinder cars in less than a year is an outstanding indication of the enthusiasm with which the public has received a six-cylinder car in the lowest price field. This class, he explained, offers to buyers to a greater extent than ever before the quality and performance formerly available only in cars of higher price.

T. & T. Awards

Nine national awards to telephone employees "for noteworthy public service" in 1929, have been made by a committee representing the Theodore N. Vail Memorial Fund, established as a memorial to a former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. These awards are given yearly for acts which notably illustrate Mr. Vail's ideals of public service.

Five awards go to Cleveland, Ohio, telephone employees for conspicuous courage on May 15, 1929, when the memorable film fire and explosions at the Cleveland Clinic caused the deaths of over 120 people.

A gold medal with a cash award was given to Gerald T. Mahaffey, district traffic superintendent; a gold medal to Gladys I. Gibson, operator; silver medals with cash awards of $250 each to James J. Roonan, district installation foreman; Benjamin G. Spaeth, district plant superintendent; Walter A. Turner, Jr., district outside maintenance foreman.

Miss Gibson lost her life in the disaster and the gold medal was a posthumous award. Choking from fumes and struggling for breath, Miss Gibson, private branch exchange operator, asked the local operator exchange to call ambulances and the fire and police departments, but was unable to complete her message. Rescuers found her lying over the switchboard and were unable to revive her.

Mahaffey, Roonan, Spaeth and Turner received awards for saving lives, for resourcefulness and devotion to duty in re-establishing telephone service in the face of personal danger.

Silver medals with cash awards of $250 each were given to Vivian Harper, operator, Elba, Alabama; Ephraim W. W. Decker, repairman, Rosebank, N. Y.; Iola D. Gibbons, night chief operator, Elmdale, Kansas.

Then the town of Elba was completely flooded, Miss Harper realized the danger and continued to give warnings and direct the work of rescue until every telephone failed.

Repairman Decker, at the risk of his life, pulled a boy from a third rail of an electric railway, persisted in the application of artificial respiration and saved the boy's life.

An explosion demolished a frame building the central office at Woodbridge, blowing out doors and windows in the telephone building, extinguishing the lights and setting both buildings on fire. Unmindful of her own safety, Miss Gibbons notified municipal and company authorities and remained at her post until a police officer forced her to leave the burning building.

Flood waters entered the Elmdale home of Mrs. Dull, where the switchboard was located. Despite the entreaties of neighbors she persisted in remaining at the board given warnings. By notifying railroad officials of the derailment of a work-train, she probably averted the wreck of a passenger train. As the water continued to rise, she had the switchboard elevated on boxes and, ignoring her own danger, remained on duty until the following day, maintaining practically uninterrupted service.

Mental Value of Perfume

The ancient customs of using perfume are now being revived in a truly modern way. Perfumes are assuming a larger usefulness. One needs to understand the real significance of perfumes to appreciate their value in the realm of beauty and sweetness. They have a mental and spiritual uplift which should not be overlooked. And aside from this and from the air of exclusiveness and refinement they give as a finishing touch to the modern toilette, they have become a beauty necessity.

Tercentenary News

A public meeting will be held in the Town hall next Wednesday afternoon at 2.30, under the auspices of the Tercentenary costume committee, Mrs. Merrifield, chairman. The ideal would be for every available citizen of Northfield—man, woman, boy and girl—to dress in Indian, Pilgrim, Puritan or Revolutionary costume during the days of the special Northfield celebration, July 30 to Aug. 1, inclusive. The committee has assembled a number of pictures and designs showing how people dressed in those far-away days. They can also advise on materials to use. It is hoped that all who are seeking advice will attend this meeting. Friends who have made their own costumes will also be most welcome to give the benefit of their experience. Perhaps a community sewing bee can be arranged for a later date if desired. The cost and effort of making costumes is small compared with the pleasure to be derived from them on the Tercentenary and other future occasions.

A largely attended meeting of the town Tercentenary committee was held last Monday evening in the Town hall. Galen Stearns reported progress on the Oldtime Dance. Putnam's fiddlers' orchestra has been engaged and the other details are well in hand.

Mrs. Pitt reported on the Old Folks' concert. Some 65 persons are already enrolled in the chorus. A receiving committee of a dozen ladies in costume will welcome people on entering the auditorium and turn them over to the ushers to find seats. M. D. Birdsall will act as head usher and will be supported by about 25 ushers in costume. An exhibition of quilting will be in the hands of certain ladies deft at that work. S. E. Walker will take charge of the sale of tickets. During an intermission in the program it is intended to have a parade across the platform of all those friends in the audience who are in costume so that the whole audience may get a good view of their costumes.

The historical parade, of which Philip Porter is chairman and Clarence Steadler, marshal, will depict 300 years of Northfield history. First of all, following the Greenfield band, will come original Indian inhabitants. Mrs. Ross Spencer, leader of the girl scouts, will have about 25 Indian maidens in her group, while Lewis Wood and the Boy Scouts will provide a group of males. Besides there there will be a number of Indians who took part in the recent pageant in the public schools, and other citizens impersonating Indian braves in full war regalia, and squaws. Herbert Reed will be leader of the four explorers who discovered the site of Northfield in 1669. The Grange will put on a unit representing a group of the first settlers, as well as a distinctive Grange float. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilbert are working up a float representing the broom trade that flourished in the early days. Outstanding persons in Northfield history, like Parson Doolittle, Seth Field and Captain Benjamin Wright, will be impersonated. A file of Washington's troops and another of the English soldiers will recall the Revolutionary War. The Sons of Veterans will furnish a color-sergeant and squad of soldiers of the Civil War. The American Legion will make an impressive exhibit. A collection of ancient vehicles and bicycles will depict the evolution of transportation. The Greenfield Electric Light Company will contribute a float showing the evolution of lighting from flints to the latest devices. Other floats are expected from the Northfield Schools, the American Red Cross, etc. An interesting group will be in the parade representing fellow-citizens of Irish descent, and one or two floats to represent the recent accession of residents of Polish and other nationalities. It is planned to have a reviewing stand erected in front of the Town hall for the Governors and other distinguished guests.

The committee in charge of the Old Home features is sending out notices of the celebration with urgent invitation to all former residents to visit Northfield at this time. The co-operation of all families is desired, so that no former residents shall be overlooked. Names and addresses may be sent to Lucky Capp.
